

SVEN LÖVGREN

Service Manager

Personal Details, 2023!

I am a man of 46 years old, see photo in attached resume.

Most people who come in contact with me are a little shocked in addition to my extremely "Swedish" name, so I'll start there...

My mother came from Brazil and my father from Sweden and Finland.

My four older brothers and I grew up here in Sweden.

I've had it hugely easy with it adapting in society, with top marks in all the interesting subjects in school (Although Mensa member since 1994).

After I finished my schooling in 1995, I started to work with the same and have since sought my motivation in the work - where I at the same time sought new information (learning), to inhibit my eagerness to constantly learn new things.

The reason I stayed at SAS for so long (Before the pandemic put a spanner in the works for many of us), was because it gave me so many opportunities in learning new things (feeding the mind with information).

I love studying people and their behaviors.

It's extremely fast for me to learn things, so it doesn't bother me much in it to have to cave in details, which is an advantage - as I can help support those who need management and back up those who want to show their skills (it doesn't hurt to listen and just confirm that someone is good - when one self has read and knows that they are right in what they are saying).

A little briefly about my ability to learn:

When I started working as a sheet metal worker - the instructor quickly mentioned that I was his best student ever - after he worked as an instructor for 40 years.

SAS (The entire SAS technical division - with its thousands of employees at that time) had a "competition" for innovation and improvement, at the beginning of the 2000th, which I won (with a nice prize)...

Yes, there is a line of stories about my training skills, but I'll leave that to a possible interview :)

I attended a training course at "Astar" in Solna - which was intended to last for 10 weeks... I finished all six tasks after about 6 hours and went out with top marks.

I tried another training at Astar, which also lasted 10 weeks and was completed after only an hour or so and then showed the instructor part of my dormant company and the reflection was this:

-Wow! Here you see someone who has put their whole soul into a painstaking work - which must have lasted for at least a ten-year period (I did not mention that the work only took me a few weeks for this instructor)!

The service you have put out, I see no difficulty whatsoever in delivering - especially when it is in the "pipe" of what I am passionate about.

I am pleased that you have chosen to reach out and hope that we will be able to reach an agreement, so that we match both your own and my needs.

At your disposal // Sven
